

MISSION STATEMENT

PNFA congratulates Kevin Rudd and his government on their 2007 election victory!

PEOPLE FOR A NUCLEAR FREE AUSTRALIA has been established to represent the millions of Australians who uphold the strong belief that there should be NO uranium mining, NO nuclear power plants and NO foreign nuclear waste in Australia.

The nuclear fuel cycle and nuclear power generation are embedded with many medical hazards. This fundamentally carcinogenic industry will induce cancer and genetic disease in this and all future generations, while it generates electricity for only 20 to 30 years.

PNFA encourages Australian citizens to comprehend the extraordinary dangers of exporting uranium and establishing a nuclear power industry and an international nuclear waste facility in this country; to develop the motivation to take personal responsibility to protect the future for our children and descendants; and to face up to our true moral responsibility – as we did in the 1970's – when we forced France to test their nuclear weapons underground and formed a massive grass roots movement to prevent the mining and export of uranium.

Such intense activism is once again necessary today.

Australian politicians, most of whom are scientifically and medically illiterate, must be educated by their constituents to understand exactly what the export of uranium and local nuclear power generation will mean to this and all future generations.

Ominously, in June 2007 the Australian Labor Party's longstanding No New Mines policy was overturned at the ALP national conference.

The Rudd Labor Government supports an expansion of uranium mining and export. Helen Caldicott and PNFA will spend much of 2008 educating Australians and the Rudd government about the inherent dangers of mining, enriching and exporting uranium.
